OrthoLite® foam with open-cell PU technology is breathable, allowing air to circulate around the foot, keeping the surrounding environment cooler and drier.

Lightweight

OrthoLite® foams are extremely lightweight—enhancing performance with day-in, day-out airy comfort.

How we make shoes

Camper still hand-crafts every new prototype in its headquarter workshop in Mallorca, Spain. This way, Camper can have full control of the quality and production of each shoe. Once the shoe has been fully designed in Camper's headquarters, they are sent to Asia to be reproduced, where they have access to the most advanced technology. Camper is proud of the factories they work with and hold them to the highest standards of quality and transparency regardless of their location.

Quality, as well as comfort, speaks for itself and provides customers with a superior value product. However, Camper also cares about the health of the foot and therefore only chooses the best materials on the market, combined with benefits of proven and advanced technology. Camper uses quality as a 360° concept that also includes the way shoes are designed by providing solutions and are proud to only offer well thought-out products meeting their core principles ensuring high quality standards while covering human rights and environmental policies.

A range of high comfort products, where conception, materials and construction are totally committed respecting kids feet.

Camper hand-craft, test and takes to the limit every new prototype in our workshop in Mallorca to have full control on development. Then we reproduce them in Asia and make final fitting, wearing and safety tests before the shoes go on production.

Technical Constructions

CONSTRUCTION	BENEFIT	INFORMATION
Board Lasted	Good Adjustment & Stability	In this technique the upper is wrapped around the last and glued underneath the board. The Surface where the outsole is glued on will be grinded down first. The end result is an extremely durable shoe that offers good adjustment.
Glove	Flexibility & Lightweight	In the Glove construction, the upper forms one piece that wraps around the foot. The outsole is glued to the upper and the upper is then connected through stitching on the inside of the shoe. This construction guarantees a lot of flexibility since an insole is not needed.
Sachetto	Flexibility	In the Sachetto construction, the front lining forms one piece that wraps around the foot, over which the upper is attached by stitching on the bottom. This allows for very flexible footwear.
Sandal	Fresh Feeling	In the sandal construction, the upper (usually straps) are either directly glued underneath the insole or put through cut slots in the insole and then glued. The outsole is then glued on.
Semi-Glove	Some flexibility	In the Semi-Glove construction part of the upper or lining is constructed like a glove and the other part is lasted. The outsole is then glued on. This construction guarantees some flexibility.
Semi-Strobel	Some flexibility	In the Semi-Strobel construction, some parts of the upper leather are stitched to the “Strobel” insole whilst other parts (usually the front and heel) are lasted normally. The outsole is attached directly to the insole (it can be stitched or glued) making it a compact unit.
Strobel	Flexibility	In the Strobel construction, the upper leather is stitched to a specific “Strobel” insole. The outsole is attached directly to the insole (it can be stitched or glued) making it a compact unit.
Flex	Flexibility	Flex is a new construction specifically designed for First Walkers that adds a more lightweight feel and enhances flexibility and cushioning with a Glove Construction.
